that such a song was printed. Those whose ears did not incline toward music spent the time before the arrival of the teams on the field in discussing the relative merits of the two struggling eleven. Harvard's superior weight was conceded, but the playing of Pennsylvania's backs and the fast work of the Quaker line was expected to overcome that advantage by the majority of enthusiasts. Strange as it may seem, little or no comment was caused by the protest of Capt. Marshall, of Harvard, against the playing of Smith and Ziegler. That was forgotten, it seems, for Capt. Metzger, of Pennsylvania, had declared the men eligible for his team, and that settled the question of the day. They played all right, and their help to the line of Quaker players is told in the detail of the game.

Bonanza for Speculators.
Every street-car line in the city led to the grounds it seemed. There wasn't one that was crowded, and as early as 12 o'clock the big stands began to fill up. The "no tickets for sale" signs were strung up, and late buyers were at the mercy of the speculators. Hundreds of them lined the sidewalks, and almost anything they asked for tickets was given them.

The fakers with their Penn and Harvard colors did a rushing business, and the crowd presented a picture of a Pennsylvania students assembled and their songs and cheers, led by two bands.

HOW HARVARD'S TEAM SMASHED PENN'S LINE.

Reynolds lifted the ball to Harvard's 45-yard line. The line was broken, and was downed in his tracks. Nichols went through for 10 yards. Then LeMoine kicked the ball to the 25-yard line. The ball rolled 15 yards more and Smith fell on it. An end run by Drake gained Penn nothing but Drake pushed over on the next try for three yards. Reynolds pushed over on the next try for 10 yards. Marshall got the ball. Miler through Penn's right tackle for 10 yards. Marshall got the ball. Miler through Penn's right tackle for 10 yards. Marshall got the ball. Miler through Penn's right tackle for 10 yards.

Nichols was passed the ball then and rushed for 10 yards. Nichols was passed the ball then and rushed for 10 yards. Nichols was passed the ball then and rushed for 10 yards. Nichols was passed the ball then and rushed for 10 yards.

Penn Began Holding. Harvard could gain in two downs was three yards. "Hold 'em!" began yelling Penn's rovers. Penn did and in the next try through center Harvard failed to gain. Nichols pushed through for three yards and the ball was on Penn's 45-yard line.

Schoolkopf pushed over Penn's center for five yards and Harvard's rovers were happy. They were delighted with the play. On the next try Nichols was within two yards of Penn's line, and Miler was shot through center for Harvard's first touchdown. Nichols failed to kick the goal. SCORE: HARVARD, 6; U. OF P., 0.

Reynolds, for Pennsylvania, kicked off to Harvard's 15-yard line, where Clothier got the ball and carried it back fifteen yards before being downed.

A run around left end by Nichols failed to gain anything. Schoolkopf worked Pennsylvania's center for five yards, and Hurley went through Buckle for five yards more. Nichols got five yards with a hurdle over center.

Harvard's Beef Too Much. Hurley took the ball and ran around Penn's right end for nine yards, and the ball was on Harvard's 55-yard line. Schoolkopf, through center, put the ball in mid-field. Harvard beef was boring holes in Penn's line. Seldom was the Penn players able to hold the hard-fighting Harvard men.

Nichols took the count when he tried to go round Penn's left tackle. Nichols was downed, and it was two minutes before he could resume playing. Hurley carried the ball through center for five yards, and Penn's rovers were as silent as William Penn's statue.

Penn's center was easy for Harvard and in two drives Hurley and Nichols advanced the ball five yards more. Hurley hurried over Ziegler for three yards more. Hurley did the same thing a minute later. Penn's line looked as good as a hurdle over center.

Every seat occupied. The crowd on the other stands was estimated. It made them forget the thirty-mile-an-hour Arctic breeze which blew from the northwest.

CORNELL 0, LEHIGH 0.

First Half—Cornell 0, Lehigh 0. Final score: Cornell, 0; Lehigh, 0.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Cornell lines up against Lehigh University to-day on Percy Field. The visitors have been coached by Dr. Marshall, who knows the Cornell style of attack to a T, and he decided that his eleven would surely win. In this account there was much betting on the result, the wagers being made at even money.

YALE, 30; SYRACUSE, 0.

First Half—Yale, 16; Syracuse, 0. Final Score—Yale, 30; Syracuse, 0.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 7.—The Yale "varsity" played the last practice game of the season at Yale Field to-day with Syracuse as the opponent. The Syracuse team spent the night in Hartford, and came to this city this morning. They were regarded as easy by the Yale sharps, as the team, though heavier than last season, has been defeated by several inferior teams.
